

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A motor-driven hand-held tool includes a housing (4) having a switching recess (6) formed therein, an actuation member (8) displaceably arranged in the switching recess for shifting a functional unit between different functional steps, and a functional step display arrangement having a read-out device (16) mechanically connected with the actuation member (8) and a display element (14) provided in the housing (4) for displaying an actual functional step and spaced from the switching recess (6).